Story Line/Notes: Sophia, 40, (who permanently suffers from migraines) is a researcher and sociology teacher at the University of the Third Age and has been living with her partner of 10 years, Xavier, a Middle East professor and political expert. They have a pleasant life and are rather stable, despite some dissatisfaction on both sides. Their intimate life is the only problem. They don't complaint about it, but something is obviously off there. The only thing that seems to remain solid is their social life, as well as the bond that Sophia developed with her in-laws, people she describes as dull, but softened with great kindness. Sophia's life changes the day she meets Sylvain, an entrepreneur from the Laurentians. She will leave everything she knows behind to live this burning passion. Perhaps the last of her life.
