The five-day course, which will be held from May 8 to 12, 2023, is aimed at providing First Nations Leaders, Executives, Administrators and Senior Managers of Indigenous communities and organizations with programs & training in the areas of investment governance, entrepreneurial finance, negotiations and change management.

This program is made available through AFOA Canada, a non-profit organization that assists Indigenous Peoples with opportunities to foster capacity development in the area of governance, finance and management.

The cost of the course, tuition, accommodations, and meals will be covered by the TD Bank Group, which offers scholarships for Indigenous Peoples for this specially tailored program.

There will be a group of forty-seven (47) First Nations participants from Canada, four (4) from New Zealand, and one (1) from Australia. The United States will have about forty (40) participants.
